Mr. Bennetts letters--the beautiful letters which he has written us--were in easy conversational style, and thoroughly personal to the one addressed. Those to relatives and intimate friends abound in glowing accounts of his family and the doings and sayings of the children. He describes his surroundings, and how he has spent the day; and tells of the work, and perhaps narrates some occurrence of special interest. Always his big, loving heart and his deep devotion to God are artlessly in evidence; there is no effort either to show or to hide them. He was careful to answer questions, and that too, as fully as circumstances permitted. Fond of flowers and natural beauty of all kinds, his letters were rich in graphic description and not infrequently enclosed flowers or leaves which he had pressed. Many of his letters to children, --from whom he delighted...
