Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: .He had evidently studied the instrument with great care. At a later exhibition of violins held at the Albert Hall I was introduced to a member of the well-known firm of Hill Son, of Wardour Street, now of Bond Street, makers and vendors of violins, on whom the name of Charles Reade, when I purposely pronounced it. had a most irritating effect. A converted violin changed by the application of a rediscovered Cremona varnish from new to old had been offered to them for sale; and they had declined to buy it. Hcre became apparent the weak point in the invention, the flaw in the process, the error in the speculation. If Henry May hew could have made diamonds of sufficient size (he did, I believe, succeed in precipitating at immense cost small quantities of diamond dust), it would not have been necessary, in order to...
