Instead of formal resolutions, it was thought better to embody the views which had been expressed, in a letter to his widow, - which was accordingly prepared and adopted, and which Messrs. Norton, Homans, Preston, and Whitney were requested to sign in behalf of the class, and to forward to Mrs. Ripley. Knowing that the action of the meeting, and aught relating to the memory of Lieutenant Ripley, would possess a deep interest for those of our number who were unable to be present with us, the Secretary was directed to cause one hundred and fifty copies of the proceedings to be printed, and to request the writer...
